FOOTBALL POOLS

When a cheque for £200, 000 arrived in the post one morning, Mrs Wood nearly fainted. She did the football pools every week, but she never expected to win anything. She never mentioned it to her family because she did not want them to laugh at her. Her husband and her son Ron knew all about football. They did the pools every week too and quite often won a few pounds. The family was in the kitchen when she came in holding the cheque, unable to say a word. Her husband took the cheque from her and put it in the middle of the kitchen table. Her son made her sit down and her daughter Diane gave her a cup of tea. Two hundred thousand pounds! They forgot all about Mrs Wood and began to argue about the money.

"Well, I'll be able to give up my job at last and stay at home," said Mr Wood. He was fifty-two and worked as a lorry driver. "We'll buy a nice house in the country, a new car - and have a nice easy life!"

"Don't be selfish. Dad!" exclaimed Ron. "You're old - you don't need the money! There's nothing wrong with this house and you've got a car already. No, I have a different idea. We'll start a business - something in computers or video. I'll run it and you can help. And we'll all share the profits."

"Just listen to you!" Diane said. "You're just as selfish as Dad! And you're both stupid! This money won't do us any good... can't you see that? It'll ruin our lives. Money always ruins people's lives. The best thing to do is to send the cheque back, or else give it to charity."

Then a real argument broke out. It went on and on until a voice interrupted them. "Stop it, all of you!" It was Mrs Wood, with a determined look on her face. "Now listen to me," she said, standing up. "You've all forgotten something, haven't you? This is my money, not yours. I won it and I'm going to spend it. Of course I'll give you all a share. After all, you are my family! But I'll make the decisions! Is that clear?"

Mrs Wood picked up the cheque and put it in her pocket. Then, without saying another word, she walked out of the room.
